Question 1

Answer briefly each of the questions (i) to (xv).

[15 × 2]

- (i) Define recruitment.
- (ii) What is the significance of application blank in a selection procedure?
- (iii) Explain how office layout can act as a morale depressant as well as a morale stimulant.
- (iv) State any two qualities of a good leader.
- (v) Explain 'self-actualisation' need as given by Maslow.
- (vi) What is meant by production transfer?
- (vii) Define promotion.
- (viii) What is decoding with reference to communication process?
- (ix) Differentiate between horizontal communication and vertical communication.
- (x) Distinguish between a cellular phone and a cordless phone.
- (xi) How does a business reply card help a business concern?
- (xii) What is the role of an appendix in a report?
- (xiii) Explain quorum.
- (xiv) Give any two limitations of visual communication.
- (xv) With reference to remuneration of employees, expand the following:
 - (a) HRA
 - (b) LTA

Comments of Examiners

- (i) Most of the candidates did not write all the key points thereby making the definition incomplete. Several candidates used the word 'employees' instead of 'prospective employees' / 'candidates'.
- (ii) A few candidates answered this question correctly. However, majority of the candidates gave detailed explanation of the contents of application blank instead of writing about its significance.
- (iii) A number of candidates confused 'office layout' with 'lay off'. Others wrote about working conditions, location, pay, challenging jobs, supervisors, etc.; which have nothing to do with the physical layout of the office.
- (iv) Most candidates 'named' the qualities of a leader instead of 'stating' them. Some candidates wrote qualities of a manager and not specifically of a leader. A number of candidates wrote 'Physique' as 'physic' and equated it with physical beauty.
- (v) A few candidates knew that self-actualisation is the last need, as given by Maslow and is very rarely achieved. However, most candidates had no idea about it and therefore failed to write key terms such as, 'accomplishing one's potential', 'self-realisation', etc.
- (vi) Most candidates wrote about 'transfer of products' from one place to another as 'production transfer'. Some explained it as shifting of people from one unit/branch/department/organisation to another without assigning its purpose.
- (vii) Most of the candidates answered this question correctly.
- (viii) Majority of the candidate could not explain the term 'decoding' properly. The key terms 'translating the words/symbols' and 'interpreting and obtaining the meaning' were missing in the answers. Several candidates confused 'decoding' with 'encoding' and 'feedback'.

Suggestions for teachers

- Emphasise that if a question requires a definition, ONLY definition is to be given. Time should not be wasted in explanation.
- Key words should be part of definition.
- Ask students to read the question carefully and answer what is asked and not what they know.
- Clearly distinguish between meaning, importance, advantages / disadvantages of various terms.
- The students must specify office layout to be neatly, scientifically, aesthetically arranged or disorganised, shabbily kept office being instrumental in boosting or lowering morale respectively, instead of using general terms as 'good' or 'bad' office layout. Teachers must ask application based questions in internal examinations so that the students get into the thinking mode.
- The students must be told that if the question requires them to 'state', a statement is a MUST.
- Since self-actualisation is an abstract term it can only be explained with the help of examples from real life of people who have achieved this stage.
- It should be explained that production transfer is a transfer from 'over staffed branch to under staffed branch', where more production is required. It may be temporary or permanent.

- (ix) Most of the candidates were not able to answer this question correctly. Some candidates explained horizontal communication as 'side to side', 'left to right', 'interdepartmental' or 'informal' communication.
- (x) Most of the candidates confused a cellular phone with a landline phone and equated a cordless phone with a mobile.
- (xi) Several candidates confused a business reply card with visiting card, post card, order letter, complaint letter, etc. Some candidates who knew the term explained it including the specimen (which was not required), but failed to write 'how it helps the business concern'.
- (xii) A number of candidates confused 'appendix' with 'introduction', 'index', 'summary' and 'bibliography'. A few candidates explained it as a 'disease'.
- (xiii) Only a few candidates wrote all the key words that would explain 'Quorum' thoroughly. Some candidates wrote the provisions of the Companies Act, which was not required.
- (xiv) Some candidates confused visual communication with the face to face/ audio visual/ gestural communication. Moreover, instead of writing the limitations, some candidates wrote the disadvantages of communication in general and not specifically of visual communication.
- (xv) The question was specifically 'with reference to remuneration', yet several candidates gave weird expansions. Some candidates who knew the terms also made mistakes, e.g. HRA was written as House Renting/ Rental Allowance and LTA was written as Leave Travelling Allowance/ Last Travelling Allowance.

Suggestions for teachers

- Explain all the elements of communication clearly, along with the relationship and differences between them.
- Students must be told that if the question requires the two terms to be distinguished, they should distinguish the terms and not explain them.
- Ask students to prepare a report marking all the parts of a report. This will make it interesting and easier for a student to learn.
- Reiterate key words like 'specified minimum number', 'qualified members', 'legally binding'.
- Clarify the difference between disadvantages and limitations.
- Tell students the expansion of acronyms related to the chapter.

- (b) Filling vacancies from within the organization has some merits as well as demerits. [8]
Briefly explain any four such merits and any four demerits.

Comments of Examiners

- (a) Most of the candidates wrote short notes instead of differentiating between the two terms. Many candidates used general features such as, costly / cheap, before / after, in the organisation/ outside the organisation, by the trainer / supervisor. A few candidates differentiated between 'on the job' and 'off the job'.
- (b) Most of the candidates answered this question correctly. A number of candidates wrote about promotion and gave merits and demerits of promotion.

Suggestions for teachers

- Explain types of training in the class.
- Tell students that 'Job training' is not a synonym of 'on the job training'.
- Teach students to distinguish between two terms on the same basis. And ask them to write the differences in a tabular form.
- While teaching, give special emphasis on the merits and demerits of internal recruitment and then merits and demerits of each source under internal recruitment.

Question 3

- (a) State any three advantages and any three disadvantages of Piece rate system of wage payment. [6]
- (b) Explain the relationship between morale and productivity. [8]

Comments of Examiners

- (a) Most of the candidates explained meaning of Piece rate system which was not required. Some candidates explained suitability as advantages. Several candidates gave the same points for advantages as well as disadvantages. For example, costly and economical; easy and difficult to calculate; trade unions favour/against it; for the employees/against the employees.
- (b) Most of the candidates answered this part correctly.

Suggestions for teachers

- Teach the two types of wage systems along with their advantages and disadvantages.
- While explaining the morale-productivity matrix, the teachers must explain the ‘cause’ and ‘effect’ of each situation and that morale (whether high or low) leads to productivity (high or low) and not the other way around.

MARKING SCHEME
Question 3
(a)	Advantages of piece rate system of wage payment: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Reward is directly linked with the efforts • Need for supervision is reduced • Workers accept modernization of organization • Simplifies measurement and forecasting of labour cost

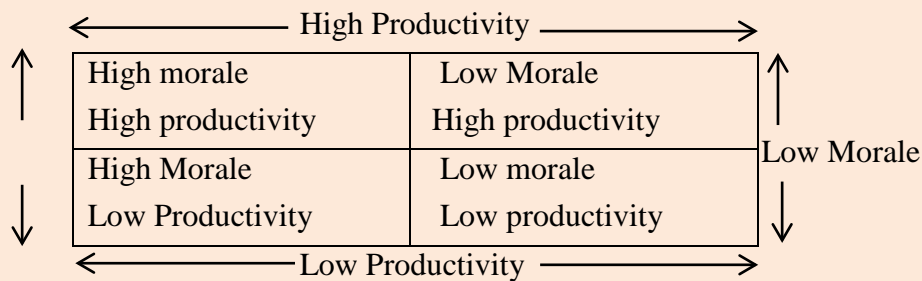

- Production planning and controlling becomes efficient
- Identification of inefficient employees and their training is facilitated
- Higher production

Disadvantages of Piece rate system of wage payment.

- If the worker fails to calculate his wages himself, he may mistrust the management.
- Insecurity among workers
- More supervision required to check wastage of resources.
- Substandard work as workers are in a hurry to produce maximum units.
- Since workers overwork to increase their wages, it proves to be harmful in the long run
- Careless handling of material and equipments
- Higher overheads
- Opposition by trade unions
- Disputes may arise regarding determination of standard work and piece rate.

(any three advantages and any three disadvantages explained in a sentence or two)

(b) Morale productivity matrix:

1. High Morale – High Productivity:

This is the most common situation as workers produce more since their morale is high may be because of higher financial and / or non-financial incentives or/better resources or complete identification with organizational goals.

2. High Morale – Low Productivity:

Although rare, high morale may still result in low productivity because of faulty equipment, lack of training or ineffective supervision. At times, inspite of high morale, workers spend their time and energy in satisfying their personal objectives unrelated to the organizational goal.

3. Low Morale – Low Productivity:

A normal situation as workers dissatisfaction with compensation and / or not agreeing to the organizational goals leads to low productivity.

4. Low Morale – High Productivity

This situation does not continue for a long period. However, not very uncommon in a short run.

Fear of loss of job, exceptionally good supervision can lead to high productivity inspite of low morale. Productivity may also be high if work is dependent on speed of machine.

Question 4

- (a) Define staff appraisal. Explain in brief, any four objectives of staff appraisal. [6]
- (b) Explain the procedure of staff dismissal that a large organisation should follow. [8]

Comments of Examiners

- (a) Many candidates took 'staff appraisal' to be a synonym of 'performance appraisal'. Some candidates wrote about merit grading which was not required. A number of candidates explained the term instead of defining it, as required.
- (b) This part was well attempted by majority of the candidates. A few candidates committed mistakes while giving the sequence of the procedure.

Suggestions for teachers

- Emphasise that staff appraisal includes performance and potential appraisal.
- A clear distinction must be made between confusing terms such as, objectives, importance, role, etc.
- The procedure needs to be written stepwise. The order must not be changed.

- (b) Most candidates did not understand the term 'routing' visitors and instead gave a lengthy explanation on the conduct, behaviour and appearance of the receptionist. Some of the candidates wrote imaginary situations of the visitor misbehaving with the receptionist. Some candidates wrote the qualities/functions of a receptionist.

Suggestions for teachers

- Instruct students to answer as per the requirements of the question.

Suggestions for teachers

- Explain various parts of a table with the help of a specimen of the statistical table.
- Ask students to prepare a table from the given data and in the process point out various parts of the table.
- Emphasise technical/ legal terms used in a 'meeting' which cannot be substituted with colloquial terms.
- While teaching the chapter on meetings, each concept should be clearly explained as per the Companies Act. The various terms should be distinguished from each other.
- Explain the concept of counter motion with the help of examples for clear understanding.

- (i) Registered Post
- (ii) Money Order
- (b) Draft a letter of appointment for a School Teacher, offering her a job of an English teacher in a secondary school. [8]

Comments of Examiners

- (a)(i) Many candidates wrote that registered post is a service provided by the post office (which was written in the question itself). Some of the candidates wrote 'it is to be registered with the government'. Several candidates failed to write about the prepaid fee for registration/proof of registration and posting/ more secure post.
- (ii) Several candidates were not clear about what a money order is.
- (b) A number of candidates wrote an Interview letter; some wrote an application for a job. In some cases, the salutation was written as, 'Dear Ma'am/Sir' - since it was a specific appointment, a specific name should have been mentioned. In a few cases, complimentary close was written as, 'Yours faithfully'. At times, the letter was centrally aligned but complimentary close was left aligned. In general, the answers showed lack of practice on the part of the candidates.

Suggestions for teachers

- First, registration of post should be explained and then A.D. card.
- It is very important for teachers to discuss the entire process in detail right from the time a person goes to the post office and picks up a money order form to the time the money is received by the receiver at the other end.
- Make students practice writing various types of letters. All letters with their format and requisites should be explained clearly.

- Questions requiring distinction between two terms must be answered in a tabular form where the two terms are distinguished on the same basis.
- Pay attention to key words.
